Tania Convertini

Director of the Italian Language Program

Tania is passionate about learning and intercultural studies, she teaches courses on Italian literature, culture, education, and language. Her latest book, L'ABC di Alberto Manzi (Edizioni Anicia, 2024)—currently being translated into English—explores the story of Alberto Manzi, a pioneering Italian educator who, in the 1960s, taught millions to read and write through television. Her research also examines the role of AI in learning while keeping the uniqueness of the human experience at the center. Ask her where she's from, and you will get a long answer: born in a small Apulian village, raised in Milan, she now calls both Orvinio, a tiny village near Rome, and the Upper Valley home. When she is not writing or spending time with students and friends, you will likely find her traveling—her favorite way to keep learning.
