Global Cuisine

Morocco and the coasts of Portugal and Spain have a rich culinary history that has changed the face of global cuisine, most remarkably with dishes featuring bold flavors and spices. One of the most famous foods hailing primarily from Valencia, Spain, is paella — a flavorful rice dish traditionally made with olive oil, chicken broth, vegetables and a variety of meats and seafood. The signature yellow color of the dish traditionally comes from saffron, but turmeric and calendula can be used as substitutes. Paella had humble beginnings, originally being considered a lunchtime meal for farmers and made with whatever was on hand at that time. Another popular dish native to the region is couscous, which has roots in Morocco and is prepared from ground wheat rolled into pellets. You can experience these savory cultural staples firsthand during an optional excursion to the market in Valencia, followed by a paella cooking class with a local chef.
